

POETRY.

The People are Coming.

BY MRS. F. D. GAGE.

The people are coming from east and from west From north and from south, bringing with them the best, That skill can invent, or the soil can produce, For comfort or luxury, pleasure or need. The Farmers are coming, make way for them now, Prepare them a welcome with sweat on the brow; Through long summer days they've been toiling for you, With hands strong and willing, with hearts bold and true. They're coming, they're coming; the lords of the soil, To lay on the altar of Ceres their spoil; With their horses, sheep, ewine; their oxen and cows, With grain from the fields and fruit from the boughs. The inventors are coming, with works of their skill; With the axe and the plow; with the hammer and drill; The mower and reaper, the rake and the saw; Whatever can labor, cut, drive, lift or draw. The Mechanic's are coming, bold workers are they, Give them place in your hearts, and your homes for the day, Half the comforts of life are the work of their hands, From retroads and steamers to jewels and bands. The houses that you live in fair ladies e'en now, The bright flowers of beauty that wreath round your brow, The slipper that guards your light foot from the soil, Are the proofs of their skill and the fruit of their toil. The Artisan are coming. Oh! welcome them too, Ten fold they will answer each smile back to you; They are nature's nice workmen, that strew all the hours, Of life's sterner duty with brightness and flowers. The Ladies are coming—give welcome to all, They scatter rich blessing in cottage and hall, Bringing garlands of love from the altars of home, To garnish our temple of Labor they come. They build not our houses, they till not the soil; But their hands are not idle, and glorious their toil; For richer by far than your houses or lands, They bring you "God's noblest," the work of their hands. Then welcome the worker, and welcome the grade, Whatever the standing, whatever the trade; Give honor to labor, for honor is due To each heart and each hand that is honest and true.

AGRICULTURAL.

New Process of Making Butter. At the late Fair of the New York State Agricultural Society, the following new discovery in butter-making was made public.

There is one of the process of manufacture so unlike all others, that I deem it highly worthy of publication as a new discovery, and give it in the discoverer's own words; and, since he has thoroughly proved his success, I earnestly advise all butter-makers to try the new plan. The sample furnished is fresh and perfectly sweet. The statement (dated Watertown N. Y., Sept. 30, 1856) says:

"This sample of butter is made by my improved method, whereby every drop of water or buttermilk is taken out of it by solar evaporation. In this process I claim to have so perfected butter-making, that butter may be kept sweet several years, without the rancid odor caused by the decomposition of water and buttermilk that pervades most of the butter of the present time."

The following is an outline of my improved process: Firstly, in churning the cream, enough ice should be put into it occasionally to make the butter come in crumbs; pour off the buttermilk, and wash the butter several times in soft ice water until there ceases to be any milky appearance. During the process of washing, should there be a solid lump of butter large enough to contain a cell of fluid, that lump should be crushed while in the water, and broken into a corresponding size with the other crumbs. Lastly, wash it in brine made of rock salt, saltpeter, soft water and ice; skim the crumbs out of the brine with a skimmer; drain each skimmer full well, and spread the crumbs of butter on zinc plates (in cold weather wooden tables will do instead). In very warm weather the zinc plates should be set on ice water. While the crumbs are spread out thinly, place the butter in the middle of a milk room; open all the windows, and a current of air passing over it will evaporate all the moisture in warm weather, if the room is suitably ventilated. Care should be taken not to have any other moisture, such as water on the floor, or wet dairy furniture in the room. When the butter is perfectly dry, pack it down immediately; let there be no more working of it than is necessary to pack it solid in a jar or tub. This will secure unbroken the crystals of butter and its original flavor. As near as I can ascertain there will not exceed one ounce of salt to ten pounds of butter, by the process of brine salting. As a general thing, in making for hospitals, gouty invalids and sick persons, the salting process should be omitted altogether. Butter made in this way (without salt) if sealed in cans or jars and placed in an atmosphere or chamber of bin-oxide of nitrogen, I believe, will keep any practical number of years.

"I have also a new butter-tub which I hoped to be able to present to you, but sickness has prevented me this year. It is a butter-tub (turned in halves, opening in the middle like a match-box, circular tenon), made of ordinary porous wood, kiln-dried, then placed in an air chamber, and after exhausting the air, inject a solution of stone, which by atmospheric pressure will penetrate the pores of the wood which becomes petrified and coated with stone, without increasing the weight of the package over six to eight per cent. The tub will be air-tight and possess all the qualities of a stone jar.

D. MINTHORN.

If this entirely new process proves equally successful with other persons, one of the most important desiderata of the age will have been achieved, since it is estimated that farmers suffer an average loss of five cents a pound upon all butter made in the United States in consequence of not freeing it of milk and water, which are the sole cause of its rancidity; and I am sure that consumers will hail Mr. Minthorn as one of the benefactors of the age. The Committee, who are all practical, good judges, speak of the discovery in high terms. The new process of manufacturing butter-tubs is also worthy of consideration.

VALUABLE RECEIPTS.

Washing Receipts. We give below a receipt for washing, which the inventor claims to be the best mode yet discovered, and are of the opinion that it will save much labor, and would advise its trial by all of our readers:

To every pound of hard soap, add from one-half to three-quarters of an ounce of common borax, with one quart of water. Put the water into any convenient vessel upon the stove, add the borax, somewhat pulverized, and then put in the soap cut up in thin pieces. Keep them hot—but not boiling—for two or three hours, or until the whole is dissolved, and then set it aside to cool, when a solid mass will be formed. If the vessel is set upon the warm stove at night the operation will be completed in the morning, though we think it better to stir the mass just before it is cooled.

The night before washing, rub the clothes where most soiled, with the soap, and soak in water till morning. This soap which has been more than doubled in quantity, will go quite as far for bulk as the original, thus saving at least one-half. The boiling and washing are to be performed in the usual manner; but it will be found that the labor of rubbing is diminished three-fourths, while the usual caustic or eating effect is lessened; and the hands retain a peculiar soft and silky feeling even after a large washing. The preparation is adapted to all kinds of fabrics, colored or uncolored, including flannels; and it is thought to increase their whiteness. By using this preparation, with the previous soaking over night, we have had sixteen dozen pieces early in the forenoon, when by the old process it would have been "an all day's job."

Cheap Vinegar.

The juice of one bushel of sugar beets, which any farmer can raise with little cost will make from five to six gallons of vinegar, equal to the best made of elder wine. First wash and grate the beets, and express the juice in a cheese-press, or in any other way which a little ingenuity can suggest, and put the liquor into a barrel; cover the bung with gauze and set it in the sun, and in fifteen or twenty days it will be fit for use. By this method the very best of vinegar can be obtained without any great trouble or expense, and of a much better quality than the stuff sold at the shops, much of which is muriatic acid, or acids of a still more poisonous quality.

How to Make Tea Properly.

The proper way to make a cup of good tea is a matter of some importance. We would recommend the trial of the following manner: Fill the tea-pot up with boiling water, then put the tea into the pot, and allow it to stand for five minutes before it is used; the leaves gradually absorb the water and as gradually sink to the bottom; the result is that the leaves are not scalded, as they are when boiling water is poured over them, and you get all the true flavor of the tea. In truth, much less tea is required in this way than under the old and common practice.
